

ABSTRACT

A method is disclosed for operating a mobile device for projecting image data. At least one variable representing the current projection environment is determined by a first light source at least once during a current projection phase. At least one parameter of the current projection phase is adapted on the basis of the determined variable. A mobile projector device operating the disclosed method is also described herein.